

NEW IROQUOIS GOLF COURSE PROGRESSING

It is Planned to Have Nine Temporary Holes Ready by July First

Construction of the Iroquois Golf links, in the rear of the Locomotive Club, is going on apace. It is planned to have nine temporary holes ready for competition on July 1 or 4, but next spring the club will blossom forth with 18 holes. The course was designed by Deyreux Emmet of New York, noted golf architect, and is being constructed under the supervision of Philip Turnesa, a brother of Joe Turnesa, professional at the Elmsford (N. Y.) Country Club, who finished in sixth place among the eastern qualifiers for the national open championship at Worcester, Mass., last week, with a card of 145.

Philip Turnesa began his work on the Iroquois course on Monday and promises to rush the work along. Turnesa, who was sent here by Mr. Emmet to direct the work at the Iroquois course, came here from Mechanicville, where he worked on the reconstruction of the course there.

The Iroquois pro is quite a player himself. In a match Sunday on the Mechanicville links he turned in a card of 73 for the 18 holes. The match was between two pairs of professionals. Turnesa and Noel won by a score of 17 to 13, against George Pulver, pro at the McGregor links, and Joe Christopher, Saratoga Golf Club pro. Turnesa and Noel won by a score of 6 up and 5 to play. Turnesa's card of 73 was one over par.

The advent of the Iroquois Golf Club here is being met with favorable comment on all sides. Many golfers agree here is a field here for a third course and many persons who do not play the game now because of the crowded conditions of the Mohawk Golf Club and Schenectady Boat Club and for other reasons are expected to take up the game. Encouragement from many sources, public and official, was received before the Iroquois competition was started. Daniel Sweeney, superintendent of parks, was highly pleased with the scheme and Mayor Campbell also added his word of encouragement. Several members of the Mohawk Golf Club are giving the promoters of the Iroquois Club some excellent advice and are helping in more ways than one.

One of the features of the Iroquois course is that it will be a semi-public affair. Inasmuch as it will be open to almost anyone to play on, whether for a day's round or a season's membership. No initiation fee is provided, thus lending more of a public course flavor to it. The course is being built on a parcel of land containing 133 acres, not more than ten and a half miles from the center of the city, though it lies just beyond the city limits in Niskayuna. Persons who have seen the land say it is a beautiful golf layout and far from the usual amount of work will be required to condition it. Of the 133 acres it is understood that only about 25 acres will be needed. Walter A. Moore is president of the club, Thomas R. Moore is vice-president, and Louis H. Stolz is secretary.

It is planned to use a nine-hole temporary course this summer, but while these nine holes are being played over the permanent course of 18 holes will be worked on. None of the nine temporary greens will be used for the permanent course. When the permanent 18 holes are completed they will be of what is known as championship length, 6,357 yards. Part of the course has been set as 73-25 for the first nine holes, and 38 for the return trip, detailed as follows:

1	275	4	16	560	8
2	241	4	11	365	5
3	340	4	12	425	6
4	120	3	13	450	7
5	415	4	14	175	2
6	152	3	15	463	6
7	508	5	16	280	4
8	494	5	18	463	5
Total	2246	35	Total	3391	38

The Lincoln Republican club, composed of men and women, pledged to the continuance of the present organization in control of the party, last night went on record unanimously in favor of the adoption of the commission form of government here. The plan specifically favored is the city manager plan.

Petitions will be circulated within a few days, and when the necessary 10 per cent of the voters have signed, they will be presented to the Common Council. That body will then arrange to have the proposition voted upon at the election in November.

Discussion lasting several hours preceded action on the plan. Speakers declared the present high tax rate is due to a great extent to running the city on a political and not a business basis, with numerous unnecessary jobs created solely to take care of party workers.

The meeting of the club was held at headquarters, 251 State street.

Young Desperadoes Attempting Holdup Run After Battle

Night Attendant at Gas Station Dares Man Demanding Money to Shoot Him

Three young would-be desperadoes, one of whom carried a gun, attempted to hold up the night salesman at the Floyd Ladd gasoline station at Union and College streets early yesterday morning. The attendant put up a fight and refused to open the cash register, and the trio departed without obtaining a cent.

About 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning a milkman stopped at the gas station as was his custom and purchased a quart of oil. John Oppenauer, the night attendant, took 25 cents from him and placed it on the cash register. The milkman drove away as Oppenauer was in the act of putting on his glasses in order to see more clearly while ringing up the sale, three young men entered the door.

"What road do you take to get to Saratoga?" the first of the three enquired.

After Oppenauer had explained how to get out of the city and on the Saratoga road, one of the three stepped back and stood guard outside of the door while the other two crowded on into the office.

"Put up your hands or I'll shoot," said one man dressed in dark clothes as he drew a gun from his pocket and pointed it at Oppenauer. At the same time this man crowded Oppenauer over into the corner of the office while the second man attempted to open the cash drawer.

"Go ahead and shoot," said Oppenauer as he dove at his assailant, grabbing both hands and wrestling with him. Oppenauer is over 70 years of age while his assailant appeared to be only 25 years old.

"I'll fill you full of lead unless you open the cash drawer in a hurry," the man with the gun replied.

"Go on and shoot, if you dare," Oppenauer said.

The other man attempting to open the cash drawer which contained approximately $300 in cash, in the meantime had succeeded in pushing two keys which automatically locked the register so that it could not be opened again in a hurry. He communicated this fact to his partner who again demanded that Oppenauer open the register. When he refused to do so this man pulled his right hand out of Oppenauer's grasp and struck at his face saying:

"Well, take that, then."

Oppenauer, however, warded off the blow with his left arm and once more said:

"Shoot, damn you, haven't you got the nerve?"

The third man, who had stood guard outside the door to the office and who evidently had seen that none of the money was forthcoming from the cash register, then struck his head in and said:

"Come on, let's clear out of here."

The one who had tried to open the cash drawer started to move toward the door and was aided in this direction by Oppenauer who shoved his assailant, the one with the gun, out through the door exclaiming:

"Get out of here, all three of you and be damned."

The trio then departed as silently as they had come and were swallowed up by the darkness. Oppenauer reached for the telephone and called police headquarters. Within ten minutes a patrolman arrived at the gas station and enquired about the affair. Other patrolmen scoured the neighborhood but failed to locate the three would-be thieves.

The theory advanced at the time was that they had a car which they had parked a short distance from the gas station while they waited the right moment at which to attempt to hold up Oppenauer.

According to the description of the three given to the police one of them was in shirt sleeves at the time. Another was dressed in dark clothes and carried a gun and was the one who did most of the talking and actual struggling. Oppenauer stated that he smelt liquor on this man's breath. The third was dressed in a light grey suit. All three wore caps.

Police in the precincts of the city were notified of the affair a few minutes after it occurred and watched for the men. No signs of their whereabouts was discovered.

BULLET VICTIM MURDER SUSPECT
HARRISBURG, Pa., June 3.—Police tonight stood guard at the door of a room in a local hospital where Dr. Cornelius Dalley, local physician, lies with a bullet wound through his lung, prepared at the first opportunity to serve a warrant charging him with the murder of Mrs. Anna Manbeck, found shot to death in his office early Sunday.

Refusal of attending physicians to permit officers to enter the room, on the grounds that shock of the accusation might result fatally, held back the formal arrest of the physician. Police said the guard would be maintained until they were allowed to enter. The physician's condition was reported as unchanged from yesterday, when it was announced he was improving and was expected to recover.

The warrant was issued today upon the information of District Attorney Robert T. Fox. Failure of attending physicians and legal counsel for the wounded man to permit questioning of the physician and information furnished by neighbors led to the formal charge. Since Dr. Dalley entered the hospital Sunday no statement has been issued by him or his counsel.

Rooms occupied by Mrs. Manbeck were entered and ransacked last night, and police are seeking to determine whether any papers or evidence in connection with the case were taken.

The shooting occurred shortly after 7 Sunday morning. It was determined today from statements of neighbors, Mrs. Elizabeth Ross, occupant of an apartment above Dr. Dalley's office, declared the first shot, a few minutes after 7, was followed by a heated discussion in the rooms below during which she said she heard the physician say he was "tired of this." She declared she heard him telephone and heard the second shot, about 15 minutes after the first.

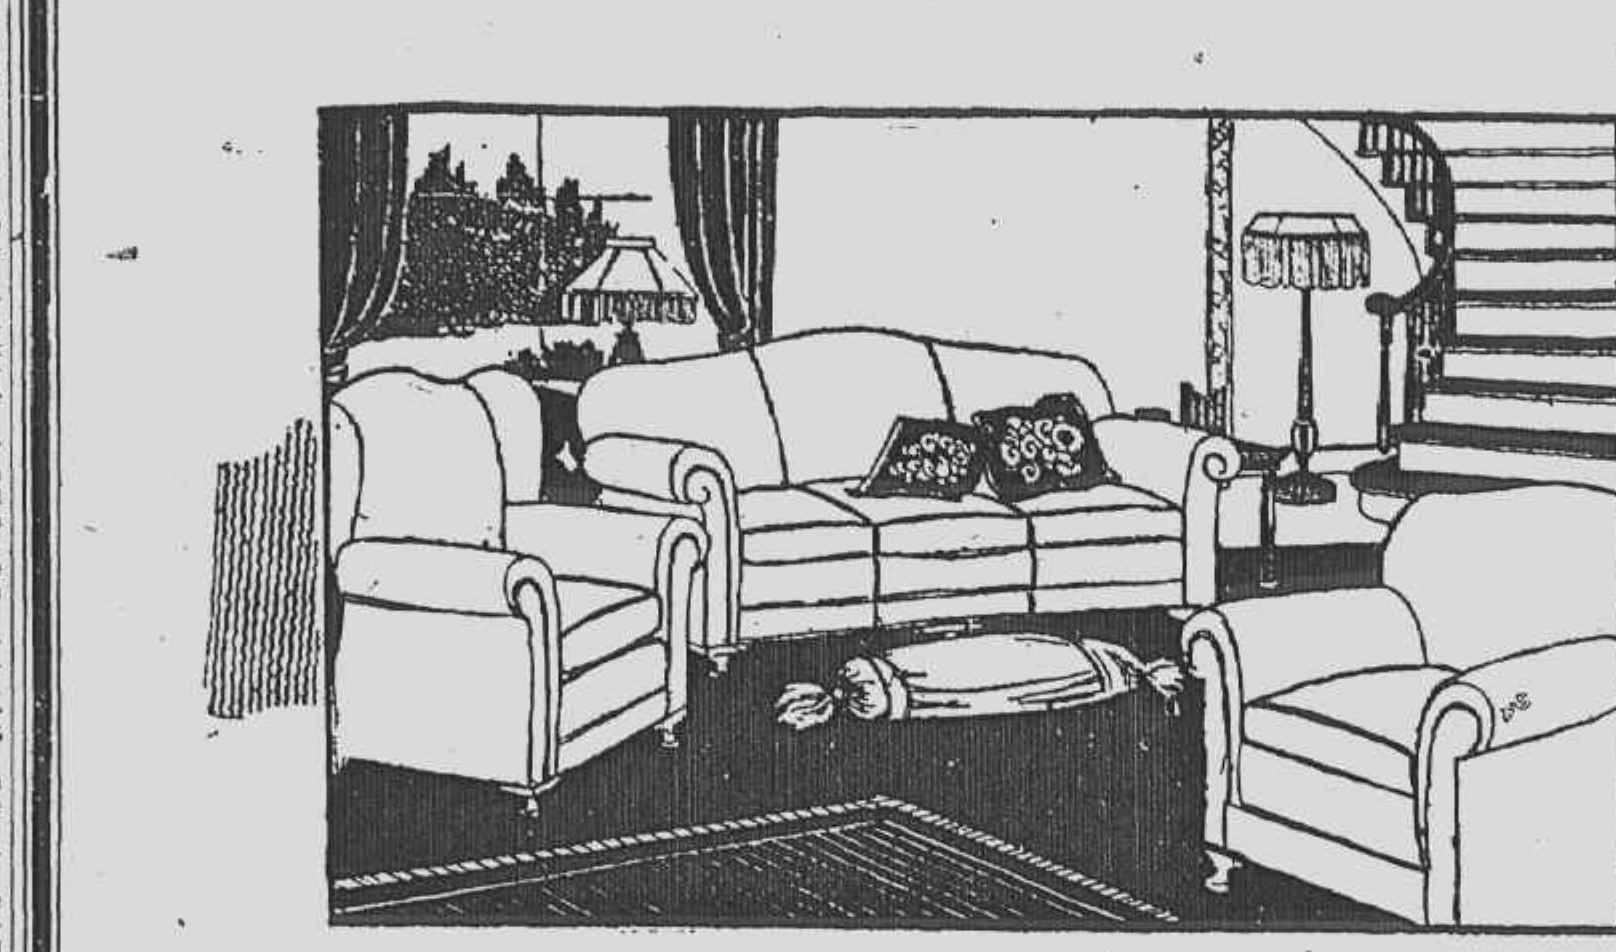

Dr. Dalley had not been living with his wife for about a year, but had been living alone and cooking his own meals. Mrs. Manbeck, a widow, lived with relatives and had been friendly with the physician since last summer. She was not at her home Saturday night and police have failed thus far to learn where she spent the night.
