NEW GOLF COURSE OPEN IN ASTORIA

To men who play golf the opening of the new Queens borough links in Astoria a few days ago was an event of no little importance.

Every golfer has longed for links accessible to his office or store, and in the Astoria course such accessibility has been found.

The course lies between Flushing avenue and Bowers Bay road and can be reached by motor in eight minutes from the Queensboro bridges plaza along Jackson avenue, Second avenue, Flushing avenue and Steinway avenue to the clubhouse.

The course may also be reached by taking the subway to Hoyt avenue and there changing to the Flushing avenue trolley or by taking a Steinway avenue car from the Manhattan end of the bridge.

An old colonial mansion has been remodeled into a clubhouse and contains every appointment and convenience. Necessary features, such as shower baths, lockers, dining room, etc., are all provided at the clubhouse.

The more strictly technical requirements of the golf clubhouse can all be found at the professional's workshop.

Membership is not required to avail oneself of the privileges on this new links. It will be run on the lines of Salisbury links, and anybody can play by the payment of small sum, weekly, monthly and annual tickets can be bought with consequent reduction.

The course is 5,560 yards long, was laid out by Devereux Emmet, and thanks to its natural hazards and a rather difficult water hole, is a course interesting to any golfer. Altogether, the ease and cheerfulness with which links may be reached, the short time required for reaching them, and with the high quality of golfing service attained—all make this new links appear as a long stride in making golf safe for democracy.

On the course are several holes of excellent length, and the average player will find a deal of use for his par.

Par is 36 out and 34 home.

Following is the arrangement of the holes and their distances in yards:—Out, 225, 235, 200, 325, 470, 450, 440, 135, 425, total 2,965 yards; in, 335, 120, 370, 465, 390, 170, 175, 465, 165, total 2,653 yards; length over all, 5,560 yards.

Lowell, Mass.—"For the last three years I have been troubled with the Change of Life and the bad feelings common at that time. I was in a very nervous condition, with headaches and pain a good deal of the time so I was unfit to do my work. A friend asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it has helped me in every way. I am not nearly so nervous, no headache or pain. I must say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best remedy any sick woman can take."

MR. BLOOMINGDALE SEES PROSPERITY
IN WAR'S WAKE

DEPARTMENT STORE PROPRIETOR WRITES ON "WAR AND BUSINESS."

Striking Paragraphs From Book Indicate That It Will Be One of Most Important Works Concerning Great Conflict.

Residents of Queens are much interested in the announcement of the writing of a book on "War and Business" by Samuel J. Bloomingdale of Bloomingdale's Department Store.

Extracts from the book indicate that it will prove one of the most important and interesting works published concerning the great war as affecting business.

Mr. Bloomingdale in his book contends that prosperity follows in the wake of war. The more terrible the war, he declares, the more prodigious the prosperity. Some striking paragraphs are:

"In the common sense of the world, there can be no doubt that war is the positive evil. For the phenomena of prosperity following in the wake of the war we must look to other spiritual forces."

"Prosperity follows not only after war, but springs into view with a great bound almost instantly with the conflict. This applies to every part of a country at war except that part which is in the immediate theatre of military operations."

"War involves the destruction of wealth, that is of stored up labor, and a rapid and unprecedent consumption of products of immediate labor that must be met or paid for later in the form of taxes."

"When an individual suffers a great material loss or has in anticipated a loss of capital, income or resources he will make every effort to stave off the loss, to lessen its volume, and, if possible, try to cover himself completely; not being satisfied then, he will make such efforts as he can to make his position more sound and solid than it was before the spectre of loss loomed on his horizon."

"So too, does the collective sense of a whole people, itself guided by the more foresighted and able minds of the nation in the face of war, to repair the ravages both immediate and in prospect, that war is known to cause."

"This then is the psychology, if one may so define it, of prosperity springing into life on the heels of war. New and towering necessities arise. They must be met. They generally are met, and great movable necessities loom in anticipation are also met, so that a new enhanced prosperity gets under way that lasts long after the period of conflict."

"There can be nothing more true in economics than that necessity is the mother of invention. Invention meets need and the satisfaction of needs that is production, gives rise to prosperity."

"It seems a good thing sometimes to have the bottom knocked out of values for there is a periodic necessity for a revaluation of all values whether of material commodities or human viewpoints as they relate to art, letters, industry, or any of the other social forces."

"War calls for great sacrifices. Times that try men's souls bring about a great mental and spiritual awakening. Old customs and institutions seem not to satisfy the awakened consciousness of men."

"The great sacrifices entailed by war seem to reawaken the racial impulse to a new sense of the sacredness and value of human life."

"In the endeavor to make material life on the whole more secure and as a result of some estimation came to seem trifling and small, and so everything considered to be valued in the degree in which it administered to a new and higher sense of human uses."

"If merchants and manufacturers could find it possible to economize in any way either by reducing the number of employees or the consumption of material the inevitable consequence would be an enormous curtailment of employment and consequently of unemployment."

"It might be possible to all armies with unemployed men but it would be impossible to succeed in any great campaign where there was not plenty of employment at home."

"High prices and threatened scarcity have always been the chief most powerful stimulants of invention and industrial organization and there can be no reason to doubt but that these forces are operating now."

"LONE WOLF" AT THE STEINWAY

Another great program has been arranged for the Steinway theatre, Steinway avenue, near Jamaica avenue, during the present week.

Herbert Brennon, who produced "War Brides" and "The Eternal Sin," has produced a third picture of enthralling interest, the "Lone Wolf."

It is a picture of Louis Joseph Vance's thrilling novel of mystery and adventure, and is conceded to be a masterpiece of the moving-picture stage.

The play relates the adventures of a master crackman known to the police as the Lone Wolf. This man became a crook through his adoption in his boyhood by a clever criminal, who was killed through the treachery of one of his accomplices.

Against this accomplice named Eckstrom, the boy avenges vengeance and when, in later years, he comes across the trail of this man, he pursues it with an inflexible purpose. The trail leads him into a series of highly exciting adventures with a gang of crooks known as the Pack.

In the course of these adventures, he meets a wonderful girl, who, he believes, is herself a crook, but who is in reality a secret service agent.

The Lone Wolf saves her from the Pack and they escape from France to England in an aeroplane, after several stormy scenes in which they pass through many thrilling perils. In the end the girl discloses her identity but lets the Wolf escape under the promise of reformation, and it is left to the spectators to imagine a subsequent reunion of the couple, under happier and more tender circumstances.

So strong is the cast of players presenting this diverting melodrama, that it was decided not to present any single one of them as a star, the entire list being made up of photoplayers of stellar calibre.

Hazel Dawn, who is known to every devotee of the stage and screen, and Bert Lytell, an actor of international reputation, play the leading roles, and in their support appear such distinguished names as Alfred Hickman, Edward Aboles, William E. Shay, Stephen Gratton, William Riley Hatch, Florence Ashbrook, Juliet Brenon, Joseph Challes, Ben Graham, Robert Fischer and Master Cornish Beck.

For Thursday, Friday and Saturday the program will include the five-act drama, "The Love Letters," in which Bessie Love appears in the title role.

In addition, there is the customary high-class vaudeville, throughout the week, short comedies, latest Hearst-Pathe news and other features.

MEN EXPRESS THEIR THANKS.

The ten drafted men from the 173rd district who went to Yaphank last Monday have written the following letter to Long Island City Chapter Red Cross and Exemption Board No. 173 thanking the former for the comfort kits and the latter for the theatre party and supper.

"We the enlisted men from district No. 173, wish to take this opportunity of publicly thanking the members of Long Island City Chapter Red Cross for their splendid gifts of kits presented to the men before departure for Yaphank Monday morning."

"They have been a source of great joy and comfort to us all and it will take a long while for us to forget your kindness."

"To the members of Local Board No. 173, we also extend our heartfelt thanks for the manner in which we were treated, not forgetting the theatre party and supper, Saturday night and the courteous treatment all around."
