

EVERETT SHINN STAGES A STRIKING MELODRAMA

"Lucy Moore, the Prune Hater's Daughter" Is Seen at His Littlest Theatre.

NOTHING LIKE IT BEFORE Except His Previous Productions—Sparkling Lines in This Latest Backyard Play.

"Lucy Moore, the Prune Hater's Daughter" at Everett Shinn's Littlest Theatre, 112 Waverly Place (the Shinn back yard).

Mr. Everett Shinn, known to the continent for years as an admirable mural painter, a facile worker in paste and an illustrator, recently, as has been told, decided to give a theatrical New York still only one more playhouse, and so last night threw open the doors of the Littlest Theatre.

Without exception the players in the Littlest Theatre's troupe have, like Mr. Shinn himself, made enormous fortunes with brush, pen or pencil and now are in financial standing that permits them to give up their vocations and devote their nights to a variety of amusements.

The innocent bystanders gathered at the Littlest Theatre last night and occupying every camp stool in the place applauded violently, especially during the great spider scene in the old mill during the first act.

Owen Johnson, who as author of "The Comet," in which Mme. Nazimova starred, had come to New York, Ben All Haggin, whose judgment is generally somewhat biased, Paul Dougherty, the painter, and Mrs. Dougherty; William J. Glackens, Lool's brother; Mr. and Mrs. Putnam Brinley, Arthur Ruhl, Mrs. Wilfred Buckland, Joseph Gilder and Dr. Harry Briston-stool and his first aid kit.

The music was supplied by an orchestra of three pieces, a lady, a piano and a piano stool. Hardwood Piano used Exclusively. Bell will Ring in Café One Minute before Curtain rises. Dr. Harry Bristonstool of 152 West Fifty-seventh street will kindly leave his Seat Number at the Box Office if he expects to be Called.

Playwright and Producer Shinn originally intended to present "The Prune Hater's Daughter" for the first night of its four night run this evening. Word of this reached the management of Barnum's Circus and there was a clash.

But even before this the curtain rises and Sammy Sinks enters the old mill and says, "Gosh d'git! Lucy's father, he tells the bleachers, has disappeared and folks think mebbe he was drowned."

SOCIETY FOLK WILL SING "THE MIKADO"

Gilbert and Sullivan Operetta to Be Given at the Plaza Twice To-morrow.

A CHILDREN'S BENEFIT Many Tickets Have Already Been Sold—Supper Will Follow Both Performances.

There was a dress rehearsal yesterday at the Plaza of Gilbert and Sullivan's operetta "The Mikado," which will be produced to-morrow afternoon and evening and also on Saturday evening by members of the Spence School Society.

The net proceeds will be devoted to an outdoor class for tubercular crippled children.

The title role will be played by Miss Catherine S. Burton and the other rôles have been assigned as follows: Yum Yum, Miss Helen Rich; Poo, Miss Nathalie Jorrod Kelley; Poo, Miss Nathalie Jorrod Kelley; Poo, Miss Nathalie Jorrod Kelley; Poo, Miss Nathalie Jorrod Kelley.

Among the girls to act as ushers will be Misses Doris Torrey, Ruth Mear, Eleanor Prentice, Marjorie Cleveland, Mildred Dodge, Lillian Endicott, Emma L. Roney, Mildred Murphy, Elizabeth Sablin, Julia Dick, Dorothea Darlington and Dorothy Shepley.

Many tickets have already been sold. Tickets may be purchased of Miss Carol Harriman at her house, 1 East Sixty-ninth street, and also at the Littlest Theatre, which will be a supper after each performance, tickets having been placed at $2 for each person.

Judging from the rehearsal there will be an interesting performance, the success of which is already assured.

MRS. TAFT AT WOMAN'S SHOW. Denied That She Was Hurt by a Fall in Alighting From Wheel Chair.

Yesterday was made notable at the Woman's Industrial Exhibition by the presence of Mrs. William Howard Taft. The wife of the President, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Anderson, went to the Grand Central Palace early in the afternoon, where she was received by a large committee of exhibition officials.

The guest of honor spent nearly two hours in viewing all the various exhibits, that is all, except the New York Woman's Suffrage Association war camp.

An extra performance of Puccini's "La Boheme" was given at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday afternoon. The cast was not one of great strength and this doubtless accounts for the fact that the popular opera was heard by a somewhat smaller audience than it usually attracts.

MORE MORGAN ART ON CELTIC. Fourth Shipment Consists of Silver From South Kensington Museum.

Another consignment of the J. Pierpont Morgan art treasures, packed in cases, duly sealed and appraised in London, aboard the White Star liner Celtic, which left Liverpool last Thursday, is due in New York late to-morrow evening.

The Morgan collection of silver works of art, while not of great magnitude, is extremely valuable and contains many rare examples. It is rich in ancient chalices, beautiful medallions and silver gilt objects of unusual shape and design.

Another silver gilt pax in the collection with central panel representing the Madonna and Child is reported to be an Italian work of the late fifteenth century. The arms on this pax are those of the famous family of Benucci of Montalcino and of Lucca.

The unique example of a sixteenth century silver gilt pax, pinnacule cup and cover in repoussé, silver gilt, which originally belonged to a club in the old town of Ingolstadt on the Danube.
