

Refreshing the curriculum with RSD: A Symposium

Tuesday, 27th November 2012

Building H, Caulfield Campus, Monash University

The Research Skill Development (RSD) framework has ignited rich conversations and diverse partnership approaches to students' research skills acquisition.

This symposium will highlight:

- successful applications of the RSD framework across coursework, disciplines and institutions to make research skills explicit
- collaborations between academics, librarians, learning skills advisers and other professional staff for RSD implementation
- ways to evidence students' research skill development
- sustainable implementation of RSD informed approaches to learning and teaching

The symposium will be informative for those who are implementing and contributing to curriculum renewal, including Discipline Academics, Librarians and Learning Skills Advisers.

Keynote: Dr John Willison, Leader, Research Skill Development Project, The University of Adelaide

Closing: Professor Adam Shoemaker, Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Education), Monash University

Full program will be available closer to the date.

Registration: www.rdsymposium.eventbrite.com Enquiries: irene.lee@adelaide.edu.au Visit: www.rsd.edu.au

Supported by the Australian Government Office for Learning and Teaching

