What is a Direct Support Professional (DSP)?

A DSP works directly with those we support - individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities. Peaceful Living DSPs work in our Residential, Family Services, and Day Programs.

Why are DSPs critical to our organization?

- They connect the skills and passions of our individuals with activities and outings that help them achieve their goals.
- They create a space for collaboration and connection within the community.
- They create an environment of belonging for those we serve.

What's the biggest requirement to get a position as a DSP?

Not a Bachelor's degree – but instead, the heart to help our people connect their passions with the community.

What is a typical day of a DSP?

No two are alike, but what remains constant is the support and friendship they give to those we serve.
